CRIME DATA & INFORMATION SHARING ISSUES

Throughout Indian country, tribal governments are faced with rising crime, violence and victimization issues. Tribes need accurate and timely data to understand the scope and prevalence of these problems and to make informed decisions about what to do about public safety in their communities. The collection and analysis of crime and victimization data are critical elements in the satisfactory completion of the grant process to demonstrate tribal needs to private, local, federal and state funding agencies.

Tribes often encounter problems associated with collection, management, and analysis of local crime, violence, and victimization data. While most tribes collect information manually, it is not known to what extent tribes are able to use this data for their own purposes, report or share it with other tribal, local, state or federal law enforcement agencies.

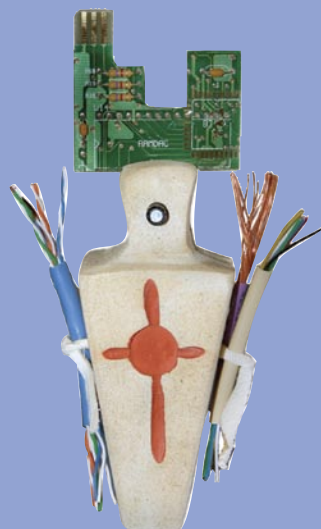

The Conference addresses the above issues in plenary and workshop presentations through the following Conference categories:

- Information Sharing and Data Exchange
- Information Technology
- Research and Evaluation
- Statistics and Data Collection

Attention is given to the recent Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006 (Public Law 109-248). For example, sessions will include discussions on technical assistance available for tribes that elect to develop their own sex offender registries and technologies associated with these databases.

The Conference will provide participants with informative panel presentations, keynote presentations, breakout sessions, luncheons, and an exhibitor gallery showcasing the latest information technology used to collect and share data.

This year's Conference is being held in conjunction with the U.S. Department of Justice, Tribal Justice and Safety-Consultation, "One OJP" Tribal Training and Technical Assistance (TT&TA) Session #4. The TT&TA session will be held on July 30-August 1, 2007. We encourage you to register for both events. For more information visit the TT&TA Session web site at: <http://www.fvtc.edu/public/content.aspx?ID=1278&PID=56> or the Tribal Justice and Safety web site at: <http://www.tribaljusticeandsafety.gov/>

TECHNO-DODEMS™

Techno-dodems™ represent the fusion of modern technology and neolithic sensibilities. The word "dodem" is an Ojibway word, from which totem was taken, that refers to the effigy or other symbol of a clan, family or social group that share a common ancestry or affiliation.

Techno-dodems™ are based in natural sculptural elements and embellished with technological artifacts and components.

Techno-dodems™ are made exclusively by Stephen Wall and Laura Fragua-Cota.
